Talk by Rodney Scarle*

Volunteer at the
Norris Museum in St Ives

*This talk is about the long and illustrious story of the English silver hammered penny that spans some 900 years of Anglo-Saxon, medieval and early post-medieval history. The design and minting of the coins, including the operation of a mint at Huntingdon, is covered using illustrations of coins from the Norris Museum collection and elsewhere. The talk concludes with the discovery of a local coin hoard and the theft of coins from the museum in August 1964, which were later recovered.
